Dear Mr. Kounoupis,

thank you again for forwarding my earlier enquiry to Mr. Georgiou, who has been very helpful regarding the doctoral scholarships and the tuition fee structure.

I am writing to you now about a different matter, which I believe falls within your area: financial aid based on personal circumstances, as distinct from merit scholarships.

My situation briefly: I am completing my MSc at European University Cyprus in January 2027 and am applying for the PhD in Business Administration for the February 2027 intake in Nicosia. I finance my studies entirely from my own earnings; my family is not in a position to contribute, and I am the first person in my family to attend university. I am currently working and saving in order to fund the move to Cyprus.

May I ask:

1. Does the University offer need-based financial aid for doctoral students, and if so, what are the criteria and how does one apply?
2. Mr. Georgiou mentioned that the tuition instalments can be extended to up to twelve through my Academic Advisor. Is that arrangement also available to doctoral students from the start of the program, and whom should I approach to request it?
3. Are there any hardship funds, emergency support, or deferred payment arrangements available to students who finance themselves?
4. Does the University offer paid opportunities on campus for doctoral students — research assistant, or similar roles — that could be combined with full-time doctoral study?
5. Is there any support towards accommodation costs? The providers I have contacted require the year to be paid in three instalments, which is difficult to manage at once.

I would be grateful for any guidance you can give. I will be in Nicosia on 12 and 13 October 2026 and would be glad to discuss this in person if that is convenient.

Thank you very much for your time.

Kind regards,
Maria Polychroniadou

 RE: PhD Tuition Scholarship – Enquiry for February 2027 intake (current EUC Master’s student) 2026031658.eml 784 KB

Dear Ms Polychroniadou,

Thank you for your email and for explaining your circumstances in detail.

With regard to financial support for the PhD in Business Administration, the scholarship and financial options currently available to you are those already explained by Mr Michalis Georgiou. At this stage, there are no additional financial aid schemes or funds that I can suggest for you to apply for beyond the options already communicated to you.

I would, of course, be happy to meet with you during your visit to Nicosia on 12 or 13 October. However, for the most accurate and appropriate guidance on the matters you have raised, including the doctoral programme, available scholarship opportunities, tuition payment arrangements and any programme-related opportunities, I would recommend continuing your discussion primarily with your Admissions Officer, Mr Georgiou, and your Academic Advisor, as applicable. They are best placed to guide you on the options relevant to your doctoral studies.

I appreciate the careful planning you are undertaking for your studies and your move to Cyprus, and I hope the information already provided will assist you in assessing the available options.

Kind regards,

Andreas Kounoupis
